

If you look closely, you can see a thin dark line around the roots of all the teeth, including the root canal'ed tooth. This indicates healing is nearly complete (it's still a little vague on the left root). There is also a new cavity visible on the other molar which is just barely visible on the first X-ray. Normally decay does not spread quite so rapidly, but it has in this case and requires immediate treatment.

